FRESCO ON EAST WALL OF ICKWORTH CHURCH.

A FRESCO IN ICKWORTH CHURCH.

BY THE MARCHIONESS OF BRISTOL.

During the restoration of Ickworth Church, now in progress, a fresco, of which a representation is given herewith, has been uncovered on the east wall of the chancel. It is on the south side of the East window. The corresponding space of wall on the north side of the east window has been replastered, and yields no trace of ever having contained a fresco.

This fresco was covered with whitewash. The whitewash was removed, and revealed the feet, wings, and other portions of an angel, which showed through a medley of lines and colours. These were the remains of later frescoes, of which it was not possible to trace the design. They were removed by blowing and spraying the surface. The work was done by the firm of Heaton, Butler & Bayne. The outline of the earlier fresco was then distinct, but there were places where the plaster had been damaged previously. These places were filled up, and the damaged lines rejoined where necessary. The figure is in outline of Venetian red, and there does not appear to have been any other colour employed, except on the nimbus which shows traces of ochre. There are traces of zigzag or sawlike lines across the body, which do not seem to have been completed. The lines of the drapery go over them. This is possibly a conventional way of representing feathers, such as is not infrequently found across the breast or elsewhere, to represent feathered drapery in the figures of angels.

The canopy was incomplete in parts, but the ornamentation was carefully copied and repeated. It is of great use in helping to fix the date of the fresco, which is assigned to the latter part of the fourteenth or possibly the earlier part of the fifteenth century.

With regard to the subject, we have here, undoubtedly, a representation of the Archangel Gabriel. The right hand is raised, not in benediction, but for the purpose of instruction, or calling attention, or making an announcement. The left hand holds a scroll, on which there are no words, nor any trace of lettering, but which, usually in the case of representations of the Annunciation (such as we probably have here), contains the salutation, "Ave, Maria, gratia plena," or words to that effect, from S. Luke i. 28.

The figure of the Blessed Virgin Mary is generally to be found in the corresponding wall space on the north side of the altar, but as has been said, no trace of such a fresco has been found here.

The dedication of Ickworth Church is unknown, but this picture, though not unusual in this position, makes it probable, though it does not prove, that the church was dedicated to St. Mary.
