

The following note of a small discovery at Long Melford has been communicated by Mr. H. H. Almack, J.P.

Mr. Almack records a further find of Roman Pottery on the site of a Roman Camp at Melford, Suffolk, where many previous discoveries have been made. This latest includes—An earthen saucer of almost black ware, a cinerary urn of lighter colour, a saucer of Red Samian ware with the potter's mark (Q V C) in centre, and a small Lachrymatory of green glass. The above were found by the side of a skeleton of unusual size. Other skeletons have been frequently found close by, and it probably marks the cemetery of a Roman settlement.

Such notices as the above are always welcome, and should be addressed to the General Secretary.—F.E.W.
