INVENTORIES OF MONASTERIES
SUPPRESSED IN 1536.

BY REV. FRANCIS HASLEWOOD, F.S.A.

At the time of the suppression of the lesser Monasteries by King Henry VIII. in 1536, commissioners were appointed to make inventories of all property in the various religious houses. The originals of these documents are now preserved in the Public Record Office, London, where they are arranged under counties. Those relating to Suffolk have never yet been published. A perusal of these records gives us some little insight into Monasticism, prior to the Reformation. It is sometimes supposed that the life of religious orders was one of ease and luxury, but their property as hereunder described, must be regarded as proof to the contrary, for their furniture appears to have been of a most simple character. The sacred vessels used in divine service, namely; chalices, patens, cruets, censers, candlesticks, &c., were of silver, but those for domestic use were usually of latten or pewter, though in some cases they were of more precious metal. Most religious houses had apparently an elaborate ritual, as the vestments and their colours are carefully described. No less than twenty-nine Copes and other vestments are mentioned as belonging to the Vestry of the Priory of the Holy Trinity, Ipswich. It is well known that organs were in use in pre-Reformation times, and amongst the property in such Monasteries as Redlingfield, and also the Priory of Holy Trinity, a pair of organs are mentioned. In some of the lists of church goods relics are alluded to, for example the arm of Saint Blaise is enumerated among the treasures of the Monastery at Eye. The domestic furniture consisted of plain tables and chairs, monks were however so far indulged as to be allowed feather beds. From the various schedules it is evident that ale was the usual beverage, as the utensils for its manufacture are specified in almost every instance. All that was required for the maintenance of the monks, was prepared by themselves upon the premises, and therefore horses and domestic animals were necessary. A list of these as well as the various implements of husbandry were carefully enumerated.

After a perusal of the several inventories of church property, the conclusion may be drawn that the life of the ancient Monks so far from being corrupt, was one of devotion and industry. Their chief concern was their religious duties, and in order that these might be decently and reverently discharged, every provision was made. This is sufficiently testified by the vessels, books, and vestments, enumerated as being required for service at the altar. The costly character of these contrast favourably with the simple and even mean furniture necessary for their domestic use; thus they regarded nothing too costly for the service of God, whilst almost anything was deemed sufficiently good for themselves.

THE INVENTORYES OF SUFF., 28 HEN. VIII.*
