

COLLECTION OF BRASS RUBBINGS IN THE POSSESSION OF THE SUFFOLK INSTITUTE OF ARCHÆOLOGY.

The number of brasses represented in this collection is 110, of which number only 10 belong to counties other than Suffolk. Of these ten, that from Hedgerley, Bucks, has a peculiar Suffolk interest, for it is one of these brasses that are styled palimpsests, having on its reverse side an inscription to the memory of Thomas de Totyngton, Abbot of Bury St. Edmund's, ob. 1312.

Of the 100 Suffolk Brasses represented, fifty I know to be still extant, having myself taken rubbings of them during the last five years; four are lost, viz., that of John Bence, 1635, at Aldeburgh, the two brasses at Lowestoft, dated 1490 and 1530, and the group of five daughters, c. 1480 at Snape (these are all given in Haines' List); one is loose, and at present in the Rectory: viz., a shield of arms at Great Livermere, whilst I was this year unable to find in the same church the Inscription to Katherine Chetham, 1577. Of the remaining 44 brasses I have no personal knowledge.

The number of brasses which appear in Haines' List as belonging to Suffolk is 301, of which 83 are inscriptions or fragments; this list however is by no means complete, for he himself states that he does not give all the inscriptions, those "of slight interest being generally omitted" (Vol. II. p. 2), e.g., those at Fornham All Saints to the Mannocks, and that at Walsham-le-Willows to the memory of Thomasina Smallpece. Moreover, whilst some brasses have disappeared since Haines wrote his list (vide p. 237), several others have been discovered, e.g., two at Aldeburgh, to Benet . . . and his wife, 1519, and to a civilian and his wife, c. 1520, and one in the south aisle of Orford Church. With these facts in view, it is quite impossible to form any accurate estimate of the number still existing in the County. The number that formerly existed was very great, as is proved by the presence of indent-bearing slabs in many churches; for instance in St. Mary's, Bury St. Edmund's, there are 36 such matrices, in St. Margaret's, Lowestoft, 31, in Lavenham Church 25, &c. In 19 Suffolk churches I found 79 brasses and 121 indents.

The majority of the rubbings in this collection were taken probably about fifty years ago, with Richardson's Metallic Rubber, a "bronze coloured composition, intended to give to the rubbing the appearance of the brass itself." A dark coloured paper was used, and the rubbings cut out and mounted on grey paper. Unfortunately these mounts are somewhat torn, so that the safety of the rubbings themselves is endangered. In but few cases has the more modern method with heel-ball and white lining paper been employed.

The following is a list of the brasses represented in this collection:—

BUCKS.

HEDGERLEY.

1. Margaret Bulstrode, 1540. A palimpsest: on the obverse of the footplate is an inscription to Thomas de Totyngton, Abbot of Bury St. Edmund's 1301—1312, whilst on that of the shield of arms, is a representation of the Resurrection, which probably formed part of a canopy.

NOTES.

1. The present existence of those brasses marked with † I have myself verified.
2. The lists of references given do not in any way claim to be complete; many of them refer not to the brass, but only to the person or to the family of the person commemorated. Some of the references I have unfortunately had no opportunity of verifying. Those works, the names of which are printed in italics, contain reproductions of the brasses.
