

OBEDIENTIARIES OF ST EDMUND'S ABBEY

by RODNEY M. THOMSON, M.A., PH.D., F.R.HIST.S.

FOUNDED BY CNUT in 1021, the great Benedictine house at Bury St Edmunds by the end of the 12th century possessed extensive estates, a large cloistral population, and was responsible for the exercise of royal government in most of western Suffolk. A necessary consequence of these developments was a highly ramified administration, at its most complex by the mid-13th century. One key to the abbey's administrative history is provided by its archival Nachlass of 178 charters, 39 cartularies and registers, and just over 1,100 manorial rolls. A descriptive catalogue of this material was recently published by the Suffolk Records Society, and it was while preparing this work that the present writer began to compile an index of the abbey's officials.¹

Such a list has at least three uses. First of all, the dated careers of ecclesiastical officials form a basic chronological framework into which further, otherwise undateable, information can be fitted. In this respect it is a particularly valuable aid for the history of the abbey itself and of its internal life. An example that comes readily to mind is the architectural development of the enormous conventual church, in which the sacrists played an important role from the late 11th until the 15th century.² Secondly, the list reveals some of the career-patterns of prominent monks, particularly of those who became abbots of their house.³ Abbot Samson's gradual upward progress from novice-master to abbot is well-known from the pages of Jocelin's biography,⁴ but the fact that the great William Curteys was earlier cellarer and prior has had to be gleaned from the unprinted records.⁵ Thirdly, the broadest developments of the abbey's economic and administrative history are reflected in the changing details of its managerial structure. Between c. 1250 – 1350, when the house was both very wealthy and under considerable financial pressure,⁶ we find the greatest subdivision of offices, including for instance four priors, and also the phenomenon of two men sharing a single office, such as the cellary.⁷ By contrast, at the end of the 15th century, when Bury's monastic population had shrunk, and when it had leased out many of its estates for long terms, we find the reverse, with single individuals now holding in their hands two or more offices as considerable as those of prior, cellarer or chamberlain.

A cross-section of the abbey's bureaucracy at its point of greatest expansion is provided by the Consuetudines Burienses,⁸ drawn up between 1234 and 1256. They describe the duties of nearly thirty officials, including the four priors, and deputies for the sacrist, cellarer, chamberlain and precentor (earlier on we also find a sub-refectorer).⁹ The office of guest-master is split into three: the abbot's, interior (for the reception of monks), and exterior (responsible for laity). So also with the functions which in other houses were assigned to the chamberlain, here divided between the chamberlain, treasurer and 'vestiarius'. Even this list is incomplete, for it omits, inter alia, the chaplains who attended the abbot, prior and the Hospital of St Saviour. Out of a monastic population of around eighty, it appears that about half must have occupied obedientiary positions at any one time during the period c. 1250 – 1350, though many of these would have been quite minor.

The following list, incomplete though it is, includes some 300 individuals who held obedientiary offices in the abbey from before the Conquest until the Dissolution. The positions are listed in descending order of importance, so far as that can be ascertained. It will be noticed that the prior is followed by the sacrist, more important at Bury than the cellarer, in spite of the Benedictine Rule and the practice of other, comparable houses.¹⁰ Within each office the order is, naturally, chronological. The three types of guest-master are not distinguished in the records, except in one instance, and so are included under a single title. Little less haziness prevails with regard to the office of the chamberlain, and so officials called 'camerarius', 'thesaurarius' and 'vestiarius' are all listed under the title of 'chamberlain', although each individual is given the title found in the sources, when it is other than 'camerarius'. A few very minor positions are grouped together at the end under the title of 'miscellaneous', with individuals in alphabetical sequence.

The sources upon which the list is based vary with the period and office. For the 12th and early 13th centuries there is the corpus of charters edited by Douglas (1932) and Davis (1954). Some of the datings proposed in the former work have since been modified.¹¹ I accept these corrected dates without comment here, unless further modification is proposed. Between about 1180 and 1215 the charters are supplemented by two important narrative sources, Jocelin of Brakelond's Chronicle, which finishes in 1202, and the Electio Hugonis, for the years 1213 – 1215. The latter includes a complete list of the Bury monks and their official positions.¹² The rest of the 13th century is covered by the Bury Chronicle, which gives a precisely-dated sequence of priors. Late in the same century was written the little chronicle known as the Gesta Sacristarum, which gives the sequence of the sacrists, without dates and not always in the correct order, from the Conquest to 1298.¹³ For the next two centuries we are dependent upon stray references in documents found in the cartularies, especially the great two-volume cellarer's cartulary made in the 1420s.¹⁴ The mid-14th-century Cronica Buriensis and the records associated with the revolts of 1327 and 1381 and their legal aftermaths provide some groups of names at particular dates,¹⁵ but the only source which gives a dateable sequence of officials is the Will Books, for which Bury is famous, and which list the sacrists from 1354 until the Dissolution.¹⁶

From these sources can be extracted reasonably, though not totally, complete lists of the priors, sacrists, cellarers and chamberlains of the abbey, but below the level of these most important offices the information is very fragmentary. Is there any reason to hope for improvement? Leaving to one side inevitable oversights and omissions, there remain two sources not mined by the writer. One of these is the texts of the Bury wills. To read them all would be a very onerous task, but the selection printed by Tymms shows that they would yield the names and dates of a few more office-holders. The other source is the thousand-odd manorial rolls. Those in the British Library, which I have examined personally, sometimes bear the name of the obedientiary to whose department the particular manor belonged. A search through the other, widely-scattered rolls, again a very large task, scarcely worth undertaking for this purpose alone, would certainly result in some new names, although its main contribution would be to provide more accurate dating for officials already known.

The following system has been used to express the dates of these officials. 'Date × date' means that the person is named in a document dateable within these limits. 'Date – date' means that the official was in office for precisely this period. 'Date/single numeral' represents a regnal year given by the source. To facilitate cross-referencing I have listed under each entry all other offices held by the person concerned. The following abbreviations have also been employed: occ.: occurs; bef.: before; prev.: previously.

PRIOR

Brihtric: occ. 1044 × 1065 (C.U.L. Gg. 4. 4, f.1).

Eadric: occ. 1065 × 1087 (Arnold 1890–96, 1, 69).

Benedict Saxo: from some years after 1066 until his death in 1094 (Arnold 1890–96, 1, 351).

William: occ. 1095; died in this or the next year (Arnold 1890–96, 1, 170).

Aelfer: occ. 1102 × 1105 (Douglas 1932, no. 20), 1102 × 1107 (Douglas 1932, no. 171); still in office after 1108, when his successor was promoted by Ralph as bishop of Rochester.

Baldwin: consecrated by Ralph as bishop of Rochester (1108–1114); 'vetus prior' in Douglas 1932, no. 111, dated c. 1125 (Thomson 1971, 214–7). Prev. subprior.

Talbot: c. 1125–c. 1136, although still alive after leaving office (Thomson 1971, 214–7, Thomson 1975, 54 and n. 14).

Ording of Stow: bef. 1138 (Stubbs 1876, 1, 250). According to the same authority he was made abbot in that year, but was demoted soon after, when Anselm again became abbot of Bury after his disputed election

OBEDIENTIARIES OF ST EDMUND'S

- to the see of London (Knowles, Brooke and London 1972, 32). Prev. cellarer.
- William*: occ. 1138 (B. L. Cott. Ch. xxi, 6, which is witnessed by Ording as abbot, but refers to the former prior Talbot as still alive; it must therefore belong to Ording's brief first period as abbot in 1138).
- Sihtric*: occ. 1148 × 1153 (Douglas 1932, no. 135), 1156 × 1160 (Douglas 1932, nos. 144–145).
- Theobald*: occ. 1160 (Douglas 1932, no. 145), 1161 (Pipe Roll Soc., new ser., 36 (1960), 70, no. 2).
- Hugh*: deposed in 1173 (Butler 1949, 1). Prev. probably subprior.
- Robert*: 1173–1200 (Butler 1949, 1, 124–5).
- Herbert*: 1200–10 Sept. 1220 (Butler 1949, 126; Gransden 1964, 4). Prev. chaplain and subsacrist.
- Richard of Ely (de l'Isle; de Ely or de Insula)*: 1220–1222 (Gransden 1964, 4, 5). Prev. precentor, sacrist and chaplain. Later abbot of Burton and of Bury.
- Henry of Rushbrook*: 31 May 1222–27 Sept. 1233 (Gransden 1964, 5, 8). Prev. cellarer. Later abbot.

Thurstan: during the abbacy of Baldwin (1065–
 1097/8), but out of office by 1095 (Arnold 1890–96, II, 289).
Tolinus: occ. 1095, dying the following year (Arnold 1890–96, I, 170).
Geoffrey (Godfrey): during the abbacy of Robert (1102– 1107) (Arnold 1890–96, II, 289).
Hervey: from after 1121 until c. 1136 (Thomson 1971, 218–223, Thomson 1975, 54).
Ralph: c. 1136 until bef. 1148 (Thomson 1975, 54;
 Arnold 1890–96, II, 289).
Elias: occ. 1148 × 1153 (Douglas 1932, no. 136), 1150
 × 1154 (Thomson 1977, 816, no. 24).
Frodo: occ. 1156 × 1160 (Douglas 1932, no. 144).
William Schuch: occ. 1156 × 1180 (Douglas 1932, no.
 146; Arnold 1890–96, II, 291).
William Wiardel: bef. 1176 (Butler 1949, 3–4); deposed between 24 Mar. and 5 Apr. 1182 (Butler 1949, 30).
Samson: from shortly bef. 5 Apr. 1182 (Butler 1949, 31)
 until bef. 1188 (see below). Prev. precentor.
Hugh: occ. 1186 × 1188 (Davis 1954, no. 56); died in 1200 or soon after (Butler 1949, 127). During some of this time also chamberlain.

Walter of Banham: occ. 1200 × 1211 (Davis 1954, nos.
 150 etc.), and 1206 × 1209 (Davis 1954, no. 26). Prev.
 physician and almoner.
William of Diss: 29 Dec. – 1 Jan. only, in a year between 1206 and 1211 (Arnold 1890–96, II, 293). Prev.
 chaplain.
Robert of Graveley: bef. 1211 (Arnold 1890–96, II, 293)
 – 1217 (Thomson 1974, 185). Prev. perhaps subsacrist, afterwards abbot of Thorney.
Richard of Ely (de L'isle; de Ely or de Insula): 1217– 1220 (Thomson 1974, 185). Prev. chaplain and precentor. Later prior, then abbot of Burton and Bury.
Richard of Newport: 1220 – bef. 1234 (Thomson 1974, 185 and n. 13). Prev. subsacrist.
Gregory of St Albans: for a short period ending in 1234
 (Thomson 1974, 184 and 185 n. 13). Prev. succentor and precentor, later prior.
Nicholas of Warwick: occ. 1242 × 1244 (B.L. Add.
 34689 ff. 19–19v). Perhaps prev. chaplain (Thomson
 1974, 187 n. 3; Arnold 1890–96, II, 294).
Simon Luton: occ. 1251 (C.U.L. Add. 4220, f. 155), until shortly after 23 Oct. 1252, when he became prior (Arnold 1890–96, II, 294). Later abbot.

OBEDIENTIARIES OF ST EDMUND'S

Osbert or Osbern: prior's chaplain by Dec. 1214 (Thomson 1974, 185).

M. Henry de Wodard and Daniel: occ. 1215 × 1229 (C.U.L. Add. 6847, f. 11). The latter later prior?

Joseph: occ. 1217 × 1220 (Bodl. Suff. Ch. A. 1, 48).

Hugh of Thetford and Richard of Denham: occ. 1221 (C.U.L. Add. 4220, f. 63).

Robert and Nicholas: occ. 1222 × 1229 (B.L. Lansd. 416, f. 80).

Peter and Simon: occ. 1242 × 1244 (B.L. Add. 34689, ff. 19–19v).

Henry Broccham and Roger of Chevington: Henry occ. alone in 1282 (B.L. Add. 36910, f. 6v), and with Roger, undated (C.U.L. Add. 6847, f. 9). Chevington was later chamberlain and cellarer.

John Shottisham and John Eversden: Shottisham occ. alone in 1282 (B.L. Add. 36910, f. 6v), and with Eversden, undated (C.U.L. Add. 6847, f. 9v). Eversden was also cellarer and kitchener, Shottisham chamberlain.

Nicholas and Stephen: occ. 1312 × 1335 (C.U.L. Add. 6847, f. 12v).

Elias, Nicholas Wortham and William of Stow: occ. as chaplains of St Saviour's Hospital 1327 (Arnold 1890–96, III, 346). Nicholas later sacrist, William also sacrist and later prior.

H. de Lakingham: occ. 1335 × 1361 (B.L. Harl. 1005, f. 67v).

Henry Kirkstead: occ. 1335 × 1361 (ibid.). Also novice-master and armarius; later prior.

G. Holywell (Haliswell): occ. 1335 × 1361 (ibid.).

John Ernstede: bef. 1361 (ibid.). Also cellarer.

Robert: occ. 1374/5 (B.L. Add. 36910, ff. 10–10v).

Phillip: early 15th century (London, Lambeth Palace Library 194, f. 130v).

MISCELLANEOUS

Adam: guardian of cellary manors from 24 Apr. 1215 (Thomson 1974, 165). Also chaplain, infirmarer and later subprior.

Henry Kirkstead: novice-master and armarius, apparently before 1361 (Rouse 1966, 482–93). Also chaplain and prior.

John of Diss: guardian of cellary manors from 24 Apr. 1215 (Thomson 1974, 165).

Peter of Tivetshall: associated with the cellary from 24 Apr. 1215 (Thomson 1974, 167).

Samson: occ. as novice-master after 1173 and bef. 14 Nov. 1180 (Butler 1949, 4). Later guest-master, pittance, third prior, sub-sacrist and abbot.

Thomas Tottington: occ. as cellarer's 'socius' in 1294 (Gransden 1964, 153). Subprior before his election as abbot in 1302.

W. or Robert: associated with the cellary after 24 Apr. 1215 (there called 'Robert'; Thomson 1974, 167). Also chaplain of St Saviour's Hospital.

Walter of Banham: physician, occ. 1189 × 1197 (Davis 1954, no. 111). But whether this was an obedientiary position rather than his training in the schools is unclear. Also almoner and sacrist.

NOTES

¹ Thomson 1980. To the material listed there should now be added B.L. Add. 4699, a recently discovered fragment of the early 15th-century chamberlain's register (cf. my no. 1304), a late 12th-century charter (Cambridge, Corpus Christi College muniments, charter 6. xxxi 3(b): see Hall 1981, 11–25), and over one hundred court and account rolls from the manor of Worlingworth (S.R.O.I., S1/2). An imminent re-issue of Thomson 1980 will include these addenda.

² For instance, the valuable work of A. B. Whittingham (Whittingham 1952 and 1971) is vitiated by imprecise or erroneous dating of abbey officials.

³ I do not include abbots in my list. Those to 1216 are accurately dated in Knowles, Brooke and London 1972, 31–33, the remainder in V. C. H., Suffolk, II, 72.

¹⁰ Regula Benedicti, c. 31. At Norwich the cellary department was regarded as the most important, although it was administered, from the 13th century, by a master of the cellar ('by far the most important of the Obedientiars of the Norwich Priory') as well as a cellarer (Saunders 1930, 76, 92).
