NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS 2013

ABBY ANTROBUS is a member of the Conservation Team of Suffolk County Council's Archaeological Service. Abby advises on archaeology and development in Suffolk's towns. Her PhD (Durham University) investigated the evolution of the landscape of medieval Bury St Edmunds. E-mail: abby.antrobus@suffolk.gov.uk

YASUSHI AOKI has been Professor of British history at Rikkyo University (Tokyo, Japan) since 1990. Born in 1951, he obtained his MA degree from the University of Tokyo in 1976. His primary research interest is political history, especially the parliamentary and electoral history of eighteenth-century Britain. E-mail: yaoki@rikkyo.ac.jp

GEORGE BARLOW has lived in Ipswich for seventeen years working as a solicitor for Aviva. He completed an MA in Landscape History at the University of East Anglia School of History in 2008. A member of the SIAH for the last nine years, he also enjoys digging with the Suffolk Archaeological Field Group. E-mail: georgebarlow17@gmail.com

STUART BOULTER was born, bred and educated in Ipswich before completing a BSc Hons degree in Geology at Plymouth Polytechnic in 1984. He has worked as an archaeologist for Suffolk County Council's Archaeological Service Field Team since 1985. Major projects include multi-period excavations at Flixton Park Quarry seasonally since 1995. E-mail: stuart.boulter@suffolk.gov.uk

ANDREW A.S. NEWTON works in post-excavation for Archaeological Solutions Ltd and has been with that organisation since 2005. In that time he has authored a number of excavation reports and publications on sites in Eastern England, covering a wide range of periods. E-mail: andy.newton@ascontracts.co.uk

VAL RIGBY was formerly a research assistant at the British Museum. In collaboration with colleagues there one of her specialist research topics is the study of the techniques used to decorate enamelled artefacts of the Late Iron Age and early Roman periods in Europe.

CHRISTOPHER SCULL taught early medieval archaeology at the Universities of Durham and London before working in contract archaeology and then joining English Heritage, where he was Research Director from 2005 until 2010. He is now an independent researcher and an Honorary Visiting Professor at the Department of Archaeology and Conservation, Cardiff University, and the Institute of Archaeology, University College London.

DUNCAN STIRK directed the excavation at Wenhaston as a Project Officer for Suffolk County Council's Contracting Team. He has worked on commercial and research projects across the UK and overseas and is now director of Aecern Archaeology, based in York.
