

THE BLOIS MSS.

BY THE REV. EDMUND FARRER, F.S.A.

The above is the name of a series of manuscripts, consisting of four books, bound in parchment covers, which came into the possession of the Suffolk Institute of Archæology after the sale of the Library of Mr. Robert Hovenden, F.S.A., in February, 1910.

Vol. I.—Pedigrees of Suffolk Families.

Vol. II.—Additional Pedigrees.

Vol. III.—Church Notes.

Vol. IV.—A Suffolk Armory.

In the East Anglian "Notes and Queries," New Series, viii., 373—375, Dr. W. A. Copinger, LL.D., commences to give a verbatim copy of the extensive list of Suffolk manuscripts enumerated by David Elisha Davy, see Add. M.S.S. 19172 in the British Museum, and among them (Nos. 5—9) it is easy to recognise those which I am now attempting to describe. Each one is headed "S. Pickering," for what reason I cannot understand, because, in the above-mentioned work, Vol. ix., 72, we have "S. Pickering, Public Notary, Ipswich, 1744." He can, therefore, have had no hand in compiling these manuscripts, which are certainly of very much earlier date. No. 5 is "Church Notes"; No. 6, "The Additional Pedigrees"; No. 7, "The Pedigrees of Suffolk Families"; and No. 8, "The Armory." All these were in 1808 in the possession of Sir John Blois. No. 9 is a quarto volume consisting of 94 leaves, containing "an abstract of extracts from the beginning of King John to the end of the reign of Edward IV., in the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk. In the possession of Robert Sparrow, Esq., 1809." This latter was not included in the Hovenden sale, and I do not know where it is now.

Somewhat of the true history of the Blois MSS. has, I fear, yet to be discovered; however, it is quite certain from phrases and expressions used at the end of Vol. II., in a short epitome of the pedigrees, with various genealogical and heraldic notes, that they were compiled by "a father," and that this epitome was added by "a son." Two such phrases quoted will be sufficient to prove this assertion. Vol. II., p. 203, "Buers, vide fol. 200 in this book, and my ffather's book at large of this family," it will be observed that it is not called "my" book, but "this" book, and then, at p. 197, writing of the coat of arms of Hovel, we find, "differing fro my Faths in ye Pedig in ys book at p. 131." As it is a certified fact that these manuscripts have always been styled "The Blois MSS.," we naturally turn to the pedigree of that family to discover the compiler's name. From statements that are made; from quotations used, from the writing, paper, and tricking of the coats of arms, there can be little doubt but that the four books were started in the earlier half of the 17th century, and when we turn to the page on which is recorded the pedigree of the family of Bloyse (it is thus written), we find dates given, which, for the most part, are wanting in other pedigrees, and not only dates to the younger members of the later generations, but sometimes the month and day of the month also. This, added to the fact that under the heading of Grundisburgh, in "Church Notes," we have more than usual about the Church, its monuments and other details, besides a list of "Diverse wayes" in the neighbourhood, and a short list of the Rectors of the town, makes it almost certain.

Now comes the question as to which of the Bloyse's of Grundisburgh was the author or originator of these volumes of MS. Founded on the supposition that the work was commenced about the time of James I., we surmised that it would be William Bloyse, who died in 1621, and that it was carried on by his son, William Bloyse, who died in 1673. This seems to have been the general idea of those who, in the last century, saw or studied it. In Vol. I., pp. 163-164 of the "Visitation of Norfolk," issued by the Norfolk Archæological Society, in their volumes of Proceedings, and of which the Editor then was The Rev. C. H. Dashwood, F.S.A., we find this remark concerning the MS: "having been compiled, as it is said, by William Blois of Grundisburgh, who died in 1627, with additions in another hand." The date is evidently a mistake for 1621, when this William Blois died. This is, however, absolutely impossible, for on the page which records their family pedigree, in the same handwriting, at the same time, with the same pen and ink, in the which the bulk of the pedigrees of that volume are written, we have beneath the name of the said gentleman "ob. 1621." It is therefore manifest that the work was not commenced till after his death. This enables us to come to the conclusion that if the MS is the work of the member of the family who owned and resided at Grundisburgh, it was commenced by William Bloyse, the son of William Bloyse, of Grundisburgh, by Frances, his wife, daughter of John Tye, of Ipswich, born July 7, 1600, married to Cicely, daughter of Sir Thomas Wingfeld, of Letheringham, and who died Nov. 13, 1673; and "the other hand," which appears on almost every page of the four volumes, is undoubtedly the same hand, only at a more advanced period of the 73 years which he lived. It will be well here, I think, to give a further proof of this identity and of "the other hand." The man who records the pedigree of Bloyse carries it down to a grandson of the William Bloyse who died 1621 by writing just the name. Three additions are made at three different periods; (1) his first wife, "Martha, daughter of Sir Ro. Brooke, of Yoxforth, 1. ux" written in ink which has turned brown. (2) the second wife, "Jane, daughter of Sr. Nath. Barnardiston, relict Jo. Brook, of Yoxforth," written with a very infirm hand. (3) The addition of "Sr." when his son William Bloyse was created a knight. One further proof: the pedigrees of Wingfield, eight in number, from which his wife came, show a very intimate knowledge of that family and Letheringham. It remains now only to decide as to the identity of the son, William Bloyse, of Grundisburgh, who died 1673, according to the pedigree here given, had four sons, William, Antony, Thomas and Robert, beneath the names of the three last, we have simply "ob." Therefore we conclude that the eldest son, William, added the additional genealogical and heraldic notes between 1673 and 1675, the year when, (according to Burke's "Peerage and Baronetage") he died. In my "Suffolk Church Notes," under "Grundisburgh," I find no memorial of him recorded. The only addition made by him in the pedigrees is the date of his father's death, "ob. Nov. 13, 1673." This appears to me to be written with the same firm hand, and the same black ink as the epitome to Vol. II. No further evidence seems to me to be requisite to prove that "The Blois MSS." are really the work of one man, and of him we ought to have a grateful memory, when we think of his indefatigable exertions at that early date, in visiting churches and recording monuments and glass, in endeavouring to substantiate or correct the heraldic visitations of the day, and in compiling the only early local Ordinary and Armory, which we possess.

In the year 1809 these volumes were in the possession of Sir John Blois, Bart., of Cockfield Hall, Yoxford; for D. E. Davy records the fact, and I venture to assert that until that time they were always among the Blois treasures, in that slight additions were made to the family pedigree in the handwriting of the 18th century. Sir John Blois died in 1810; his 2nd daughter, Lucretia Grace Blois, married in 1805 Dr. Turner and it seems probable that on the death of his father-in-law, this latter received the manuscripts, for in 1879 we find them in the possession of The Rev. Samuel Blois. Turner, incumbent of Linstead, Suffolk, who resided in Halesworth. There are loose letters to him from Mr. F. C. Brooke, of Ufford. When and where Mr. Hovenden secured them I do not know, thus, I repeat, there is yet somewhat of their history to be discovered.

VOL. I. PEDIGREES OF SUFFOLK FAMILIES.

This book, which is bound in vellum, is $14\frac{3}{4}$ in long, 9 in. wide, and $1\frac{1}{4}$ in. thick. It consists of 248 pp., with an index at the end, and is entitled on the outside, in ink which has become faded: "The Geneologies of all ye Antient Families in Suffolk." There is no attempt at an alphabetical order in it, the very first pedigree is Bovil, the second Aspoll, the third Naunton, and so on. Here and there, throughout its pages, one finds additional notes on scraps of paper, fastened by ancient round-headed pins of the 17th century. Numerous coats of arms, some of them with several quarterings, are tricked on almost every page. Of these some few are quite new to me, but for the most part they are merely those given in Metcalfe's "Visitations of Suffolk," as recorded in the 1561 Visitation and elsewhere. Now if these pedigrees were in course of compilation throughout a period of more than forty years (that is from about 1630 to 1670), there may possibly be the addition of two or three generations, or even more, to pedigrees declared in the Visitations of 1561, 1577, and 1612. Such will often be found, but no searcher must rely on this possibility. I will give a few instances. In the pedigree of Gray (see Metcalfe, under Grey, of Eye) the first name given on page 63 is "Richard Graye, of Goshold, Suff.," the "Goshold" is Goswold Hall, in Thrandeston, where the family resided. This, with the valuable addition of three more generations, makes it well worthy of genealogical research. Again, in the pedigree of Keen, also of Thrandeston, three additional generations are given to those declared in 1561 and 1612, in the latter of which, only the North Cove line is mentioned. On the other hand the pedigree of Minsterchamber, of Stuston, exactly corresponds with that given by Metcalfe as declared in 1577. However, in any case, it will be advantageous to consult it, for many little details occur, worthy of record. Take, for instance, the family of Honings, of Eye and Carlton, an additional daughter, named Jane, is given to the children of "Wm. Honings, of Carlive, Clerk of Ye Concell or Signet ob. 12 E.I. by Francis 1 da. of Nic Coteler," and then, in the later hand we have, "dyed ye wedding day yt should have been." It is not recorded to whom the lady was about to be married, and we are left to conjecture the remainder of the melancholy circumstances connected with that wedding day. Of the coats of arms, some are very curious. One ascribed to "Warner of Parham, in Mr. Mawes' book" is Ermine on a cross bretewed azure (that is a cross crosslet fixed) five estoiles or. "Wenford de Somerleyton" is written carefully above the pedigree which is corrected by the later hand to "Wentworth de Somerleyton," though the original name remains in the index at the end. One wonders whether the family (in no way connected with the Wentworths of Nettlestead, and bearing a very different coat of arms) did not originally bear the former name. "Roser of Hacheston," see Metcalfe, 101, is here given the right name, Rosier, and, whereas in the second generation, the Roger Roser of Hacheston, is said to have married. "Alis, da. of Tho Rede of Beckhall, Co. Norfolk," it is here corrected to "Alice, da. of Tho. Read of Beckles." The former would naturally lead any searcher astray whose knowledge of East Anglian genealogy would point to the neighbourhood of Beccles, where the Reads, or Redes, resided. One more example from the last generation of the Drurys

of Eagerley. "William Drury married Judith, fil. Wm. Payne, mercator, Lond.," to this is added in the later hand "Rob. Payne, sol frater," and to the second son of the generation, "Rob. Drury, natus, 1602," is added, "slayn at ye Ile of Rhes," and to Henry Drury, third son, is added, "Clerk in Chancery." It seems to me to show that the work was continually in progress, and with additions, which may have been within the immediate knowledge of the compiler. However, we must bear in mind that no more reliance is to be placed on these pedigrees, as a whole, than one would place on the pedigrees in the Visitations, oftimes such have been proved to be fraudulent, and Mr. Sydenham Hervey, who for his "History of Shotley," has consulted the pedigrees of Visedelieu, Felton and Hervey, in these MSS., tells me, they are no more free from error than others drawn out at the same time.

VOL II. ADDITIONAL PEDIGREES.

This book is very much smaller in size than Vol. I., but is likewise bound in vellum, and at one time could be fastened by narrow strips of leather, which have now almost disappeared. It is 12 in. by $7\frac{1}{2}$ in. and 1 in. thick, and consists of 208 paginated leaves, with the tattered remnants of a great quantity that have been torn away, but only, I think, that the paper itself might be used for other purposes, without in any way mutilating the MS. There is no index, only from page 190 to page 208 we have the epitome by Sir William Bloyse, with references to the pedigrees both in this book, and the other also. The pages have sometimes one, and sometimes two pedigrees thereon, with the name in large Roman letters above, and in most cases, the coat of arms tricked, with the tinctures indicated. Here and there at the bottom of the page, and sometimes near the coat of arms, we find short notes by Sir William Bloyse, for the most part relating, not so much to the pedigree, as to the lands the family possessed, where they were seated, or the coat of arms. The pedigrees, chiefly, I think, form earlier portions of those given in Vol. I. For instance, on page 17 the pedigree of Shardelowe ends, where in Vol. I. p. 56, the pedigree of Brewse begins, and a reference is made of this fact; again, the pedigree of Le Rus, or Rufus, is by a reference tacked on before the aforesaid pedigree of Brewse, Vol. I., pp. 56, 57 and 212. One further instance, the earlier portion of the pedigree of Aspale, Vol. I., pp. 2, 96, and 98, is here given with dates, to which we have this note, "in the Booke of Pedigrees Diverse Descents are given of the Family unto which may be added out of the Inquis, &c." These examples show that we have in this volume valuable extensions to the pedigrees hitherto given. The handwriting requires a little patience, for it is rather cramped, and the contractions used are many and various. We take one instance from the aforesaid Aspale pedigree. This commences "Rog de A Ten i Stonhã Antigan i Asp. Milkelfeld 5 Ed. III.," then in the remainder all down the page it is like this: "Jo. de A. Kt. of S." However, the paper and the ink are both in excellent condition still. I must add that dates are frequent in this volume, and these are taken, I presume, like those of Aspall before recorded, from "Inquis," that is "Inquisitiones post mortem." The Epitome of Sir William Bloyse, though very short, and his footnotes, though few and far between, are, I think, very valuable additions to the volume, and to the whole of the MSS. I have not had leisure to consult them generally, but I will give one instance within my knowledge how this information has filled a gap, and I feel sure other searchers will find a similar result. Some years ago I took notes of the heraldry on a monument of the Le Hunts at Little Bradley Church, one shield thereof was that of Knighton, one of whose quarterings puzzled me, and yet, I surmised that it indicated the descent of the manor and estate. On reference to Papworth's Ordinary of Arms, I discovered that the unknown coat was that of Mauvesin, so I turned up the accounts of the place in Dr. Copinger's "Manors of Suffolk," only to find that the name did not appear. However, in "Suffolk Records," by the same author, there were sufficient references to the name to show me my surmise was quite correct. When the Blois MSS. came into my hands a few months ago, I found in the Epitome to Volume II. the whole descent, which, being hitherto unrecorded, I give it here : “ Mauveisin, seated at Netherhall in Little Bradley, Johanne ye d and coh mar to Harvye—Gu, 3 bends A. Harvye of Netherhall in little Bradley left Elizab his da and h, mar to Edwd. Underhill. Pty p fess indented o and g. Tho Underhill of Harveys in little Bradley left 2 drs and hrs, Tomazin ye 1 d and coh mar to Tho Estotevyll of Dalham. Ann 2 d and coh mar to Tho. Knighton. Gu, five Annulets o. Francis Knighton of little Bradley left Anne his sole sister and h, mar to Richd. Hunt of Bradlye. Barry of 8, A and azure, on a canton A, a Tunn gu.” I know nothing of the source of the information concerning this descent, or any other in the Epitome, for with the exception of the name of “Mr Rice” there is no allusion to any manuscripts or deeds.

VOL. III. CHURCH NOTES.

This volume, like the Pedigrees, is bound in vellum, $14\frac{3}{4}$ in. by 9 in., and $1\frac{1}{2}$ in thick, consisting of 365 pp., with an index at the beginning. It is certainly by far the most valuable part of the Blois MS. The "Church Notes" have been extensively quoted, more especially by Mr. D. E. Davy, in his Suffolk Collection now at the British Museum. The original portion was, I think, founded on the material collected together by Rev. William Tyllotson, about 1594. The first time the name of this gentleman occurs is on p. 150: "Wm Tyllotson, of Ips, Clerke, in his booke, wch was 1592," and again we find it on p. 167, under Capel, "Mem, 1594,, Wm. Tyllotson Curat of ys Towne, collected ye Arms in Churches into a booke." I think it is more than possible that William Bloyse, the elder, had taken notes from "this booke" soon after, or even before, his own manuscript was commenced, because contemporary with the earliest handwriting and tricking in the Blois MS. we find such a note as that under Belstead, "Mem. I was there Sep. 29, 1652, And I perceive Mr. Tyllotson, his relation, is very erroneous, for wt he cals Tombe, is but a gravestone, and he confounds Carbonel with Liston"; then, again under Culpho, having traced out some coats in the church there as described by Tyllotson, he adds, "Culpho in Mr. Tyllotson's booke 1594, since broken." However, we have in this volume very early original records of monuments not elsewhere mentioned, of much coloured glass, in figures, inscriptions and heraldry, which have absolutely disappeared, also numberless memorial stones, which have been covered up, broken to pieces, or in some way destroyed. I can on this point, I think, speak with authority, for during the last thirty years I have visited every church in Suffolk, when I collected notes on the heraldry and genealogy therein, and, in the perusal of the MS for the purpose of this article, I found a lot of material unknown to me before. Of the 513 parishes in the county (roughly speaking) we have here notes relating to 260. The arrangement adopted is simply this, the volume has been divided up into certain portions for each hundred, and where any such portion commences, a list of the parishes therein has been clearly written out, then a space has been allotted for every parish, in the which at first, in very clear handwriting, and tricking with excellent ink, we have the inscriptions written out, and the shields drawn; however, in later years the additional notes are carelessly put together, with very many unauthorized contractions, oftentimes on pieces of loose paper fastened with a pin on to the space set apart for that particular parish, many of them having gone astray. As an instance of the care taken by the original compiler, when he commenced his work, we have one under Holton (written "Houlton") when describing in glass the rare Suffolk coat assigned to Hamelden. It is, as usual, tricked, Argent a fret azure, charged with eight fleur de lis or; on a canton gules, a star of the same number of points of the third for "Sr Lawrence Hamelden, 2. E. 2." and to it is appended this note, "Fairly in a brick Isle, Like Hamelden in Qui fuimus, p. 261. But there ye fret is gu, and. no Canton. Ye brick isle built by him, yt gave yt Coate, Tis fretted, and sowen with many fl de lice, and. ye star is of many points, like De la Hay in Guillim 275"; and then under the same parish we find again tricked, the coat of Mikelfield (the only place where, as far as I know, it remains in the county to-day). Argent, a cross engrailed sable guttee d'or," and the compiler adds "I doe thinke that it is gutte d'ore but is now washt out." The two hundred and fifty years have made very little difference in the appearance of the shield. It will be well, I think, to quote a few of the interesting things and events recorded. Under Orford we have "Also yre be many irons upon wch Rushes banners hanged and ye armes be cutt in wood, and ye Crest viz. A horse's head eraced. Also yr Impresse a bunch or bundle of Rushes." The word impresse for badge is new to me. Under Flixton is this, "for Sir John Tasburgh, Kt a silent stone." There was, I presume, no inscription on it. Under Grundisburgh, as one would expect, there is more material than usually found in a parish, and on a loose sheet is a written description of "Diverse Wayes," being interesting topographical information for a local antiquary. On p. 157 is a note relating to Old Felixstow "I saw ye stone ruines of Felixstow Hall, as also of ye Priory, too nyh ye Sea." Under Nacton Mr. Tyllotson had evidently given a shield as "Or, a chevron gules," under which was naturally, "Stafford." To this in the handwriting of W. Bloyse we have, "Mem. the second coat is for Holbrookes as at Holbrooke. I saw it to be, vid p. 169 and so Mr. Tyllotson wrote this coat in his booke, O., a chev gu, as I did at Nacton ; But I saw the workmen had made black lines for red crosses in the yeallow glasse, because he could not make red crosses in yeallow glasse, Whereas he might make yeallow Crosses in red glass." The charges were thus, I presume, very indistinct, and so the coat was styled "Stafford." On p. 169 we have the most remarkable occurrence recorded in the book. It is relative to the Clench monument at Holbrook. "In Novem, 1624 Mem, yt day yt Th. Clenche, Esq dyed, An Arme in the Tomb of his Father ye Judge fell downe, As I remembr, It was his right arme (ye Judge ob 1607) ” and this is added “ vid w̄ Vossi’ writes of ye Barō of Doñaw w̄ he was wounded his Picture crackt ī ye forehead, at ye same time.” How much one wishes that coloured glass of this description was still in existence, “ At Ash-Bocking, in glasse, A man Bokī wth his arms ō him, offering up the church, His wife Brome, with her arms ō her, Offering up her husbands arms.” In giving an account of the beautiful effigy of Thomas Heigham in the church at Wickhambrook, he says “ a gr Sould^r and Capt, ob 1630 AE 63 (He yt killed . . . Stanly) lyes at his full length,” the words which record his death are not given, however, I venture to add the same, “ he entered into his Maister’s and Redeemer’s joy.” The description of a monument at Denstone is peculiar “ A fayre Tombe wth a man naked and a woeman, I suppose for Denstone.” The List of the coats of arms in the upper clerestory windows at Preston are given in alphabetical order, but in tricking the individual coat of Mortimer, Azure, semee de lis or, he adds “ my Cos. Humphry saith Mr. Rice tould him it was for a Mortimer owne there aucietly.” Under Milden we find a description of the well-known Alington monument there in these words, “ A Costly Tombe made by a deceitfull workman for James Alington, Esq, a youngr brother of the family of Horseheath, Camb, Who dyed an aged Bachelaur about 78, Ao 1630.” Not by any means the least interesting portion of the records, though the same are not numerous, consist of lists (blazoned, nots often tricked,) of coats of arms in Suffolk houses, viz., Arwerton Hall, Sudbourne Manor House (near the church), Culpho Hall, Newbourn Hall, Brightwell Hall, Overbury Hall, Leyham, “ in the chapell,” Rougham Hall, Wells Hall in Milden, Rice Hall in Akenham, “ In Lamb’s house ” at Tostock, “ In a house at Higham,” and in one called “ Pond Hall,” which is placed under Blythburgh, and contains coats of the family of Falstaff, "In ye Maunger" at Bradfield; and in "ye Colledge Hall" at Sudbury. In the forefront of the volume are some extracts from Lambert's Pamb of Kent, p. 258 etc. On p. 354 is a list of coats of arms described thus, "Suff. in Sr. Rob. Jermin's house; Qui sumus" and at p. 359, another list headed "Qui fuimus in Suff.," to this on p. 361 is "Added out of Mr. Taylor's book some omitted by Sr. Robert Jermin, or Mr. Wm. Denny. This with a list entitled, "Vice comites Suff. et Norf. Sub Elizab Regin" brings the volume to a close.

VOL IV. THE ARMORY.

The last volume to be described is the smallest, it being only 12 in. by $7\frac{3}{4}$ in., and $\frac{1}{2}$ in. thick. It is also bound in vellum, and entitled on the cover "The Arms of All the Aũtient Families in Suffolk." At some period of its existence this little book has been mutilated, but such may have taken place simply in order to remove from it blank sheets. The pagination reaches to 161, of which the index occupies the last nine pages, the shields themselves cover but 75, and many of these have but one or two coats depicted thereon, so that there are about 60 p. wanting. It is possibly rather a mistake to call the book an Armory as it was intended by the compiler to be an Ordinary likewise, however, my alphabetical transcript of it may be thus accurately described, and as such may be of use to members of our Society, and others, to whom the original MS. is not easily available. There are in all 1,075 coats of arms; and when one takes into consideration the only possible dates of its compilation (1630–1675) the value of it, as an early record of Suffolk Heraldry will be at once recognised.

On the first page we have a list of the Ordinaries, under which the various coats are placed, viz., Crosses, Saltires, Bends, Chiefes, Pales, Piles, Cheverons, Fesses, Bars, Flanches, Bórdures, and Quarters.

The writing throughout is exactly similar in its style and variation, to that in the volumes of Pedigrees, and Church Notes, and I should say it was commenced about the same period, between 1630 and 1650, being continued to the very end of the compiler's life, in that much of the writing, and some little of the tricking, proceeded from a very shaky hand. I can detect no signs of any additions by Sir William Bloyse in this volume, either as coats of arms, or even as notes.

We have now reached a very important consideration, viz., the source from which the information was derived, and first and foremost we must place the Church Notes, which seem to have had their foundation in the collection of William Tyllotson; however, we find throughout the book various references to other works, concerning which I will attempt later on to give some little information. At the end of Vol. III. "Church Notes," there are three lists of armorial bearings, thus described :

1. "Suff. in Sr Rob. Jermin's house. Qui sumus." This is always referred to in the Armory as "Q.s." and it is in three divisions—Domini, Milites, and Armigeri.

2. "Qui fuimus in Suff." always referred to as "Q.f." It is headed by three Duces (Dukes)—Poole, Brandon and Gray—and then a long list of other names, not even in alphabetical order.

3. "Added out of Mr. Taylor's book, some omitted by Sr Robert Jermin, or Mr. Wm Denny." This looks as if list No. 2 was compiled by the latter gentleman. Both names are unknown to me.

Rev. William Tyllotson. This name is not given at all in the "Armory," but, as we have already seen, it occurs often in the "Church Notes," and was undoubtedly well known to William Bloyse. He was curate of Capel, near Hadleigh, in 1594, and a diligent collector of inscriptions and arms in churches. For a full account of him, see "East Anglian Notes and Queries," Old Series, I., 7, 17. According to the information given by the writers thereof, this M.S. was seen by Tom Martin, of Palgrave, in 1726, when in the possession of Maurice Shelton, of Barningham

Hall, and this authority adds (July 9, 1765), "I hope it is yet in his widow's possession at Bury St. Edmunds." Mr. Almack, writing in 1858, says "the thick M.S. book in 8vo. is now at Somerset House in the Library of the Society of Antiquaries. It was presented to the Society in 1771 by Peter Muilman, Esq., of Kirby Hall in the parish of Castle Hedingham. It was exhibited by me at the meeting of the Essex Archæological Society in Hedingham Castle in 1853."

Mr. Robert Ryece, always styled "Mr. Rice" In the Introduction to Page's "History of Suffolk," as also in Lord Francis Hervey's "Breviary of Suffolk, by Robert Ryece, 1618," we find an account of this collection. He was a native of Preston, a village adjoining Lavenham. He received part of his education in Geneva. He married Mary, eldest daughter of Thomas Appleton of Little Waldingfield, and dying in 1638, was buried at Preston. Of his collections one volume is in the British Museum, numbered 3873 in the Harleian collection, which has been reproduced by Lord Francis Hervey. Another volume was formerly in the possession of Arthur Collins, Esq., author of "The Peerage of England," and afterwards of Nicholas Rivett, Esq., of Brandeston Hall; it was illustrated with the arms of the families of the county, beautifully emblazoned, see Page's "History of Suffolk," p. iv. The date of 1613 is sometimes placed after the name in the Armory.

Rev. Matthias Candler, styled "Mr. C," "Mr. Ca," "Mr. Cād," "Mr. Cand." and once or twice, "Mr. Candler." He was born in 1604 and was about 1629 Vicar of Coddendam, and a Puritan divine, he was ejected at the Restoration. Under the name of "Matthias Gillett als Matthias Candler," he made his will 30 September, 1663, and it was proved 9th December in the same year. According to my "Church Notes," there was, or is, a slab outside the south wall of Coddendam Church, with two shields thereon, one representing the coat of arms of the family of Gillett, from which he is said to have been descended. Ermine on a bend engrailed three lucies heads erased, collared. The other has on it DEVEREUX, and this inscription, "To the blessed memory of Matthias, Gillet, als Candler, Minister of the Gospel in this Parish 33 yeares, who deceased Dec^r 6, 1663, of his age 59, and lieth here interred with Anne his wife, expecting the resurrection of their bodies.

Solid in divinitie
 Laborious in's Ministry
 Heavenly in society
 A mirrour of sound pietie.

Here the weary be at rest. This was erected by Thomas Essington and Anne, his wife." The bulk of his collections form part of the Tanner MSS. in the Bodleian Library, at Oxford, where there are four volumes; that numbered 324 in the Tanner catalogue embraces the "Church Notes," and corresponds pretty exactly with Add. M.S.S. 15,520 in the British Museum, see an account of the same, and the compiler, in "East Anglian Notes and Queries," New Series, I., 313-315, II., 46. From extracts one gathers that added to the pedigrees are all kinds of odd personalities, rendering them not only valuable and interesting, but sometimes, intensely amusing. It is stated in the above notice (1885) that these volumes of M.S. were to be printed in America. I do not know whether such work was ever carried out.

Mr. Mawe, styled "Mr. Mau," Mr. Mawe," or "in Mr. Mawe's bk." Possibly he was of Rendlesham see Page's "History of Suffolk," p. 125. Leonard Mawe, a younger son of Simon Mawe, and Margery, his wife, was born in this parish in 1573. Dr. Fuller's account of him is quoted, "He was bred in Cambridge, where he was Proctor of the University, Fellow and Master of Peter House, afterwards of Trinity College. He was Chaplain to King Charles, whilst he was a Prince, and waited on him in Spain, by whom he was preferred Bishop of Bath and Wells in 1628." The family, however, continued in that parish, for "lands were obtained by the churchwardens in 1615 by exchange with Thomas Maur, Gent," so the collections may have been made by this latter gentleman, or some other member of the family.

Mr. Morgan. Undoubtedly Mr. Sylvanus Morgan, who published two books on heraldry in 1661 and 1666.

Mr. Letherland, styled generally "Mr. Leth," but in one case "Mr. Letherland," My friend Prince Frederick Duleep Singh writes me on the subject of the identification of this man. "Two or three times, probably more, I see in the 1664 Visitation of Suffolk, paragraphs signed like this: 'Zacchæus Leverland,' in one case 'for Wm. Style Esq., of Hemingstone,' and under Lane of Ipswich, the arms are given as "pro Mr. Leverland." Do you not think he must be the same as Mr. Letherland? If so, it may have been some one employed by the heralds, and thus he may have had opportunities of forming a collection of his own." Dr. Copinger, in giving a list of Suffolk MSS. in Vol. IX., pp. 23, 71, of "East Anglian Notes and Queries," when describing Conders' M.S. of Suffolk Families, writes of "Mr. Leverland about 1660-1662," and again as "Gervase Clifford Leverland." I can find no other reference anywhere to Mr. Letherland, and the Prince's suggestion seems very likely. I am much indebted to him for the information.

Sir Simonds d'Ewes. The collections made by Sir Simonds are once referred to. He was born in 1602. His collections are among the Harleian MSS. in the British Museum.

Mr. Robert Glover, styled "Mr. Glover." He was Somerset Herald in 1571, and died in 1588. I am uncertain as to the date of the first printed edition of "Glover's Ordinary."

Mr. Brooke, referred to as "out of Brooke's book." It was suggested to me by my friend, Rev. S. H. A. Hervey that this might refer to the collections of Mr. Ralph Brooke, Herald, 1553-1625, see Dict. Nat. Bio., VI., 431, but I fancy the reference is to the collections of Sir R. Brooke, of Yoxford, who was connected by marriage with the family of Blois.

Two other people are mentioned, Mr. Clopton and Mr. Rivett, well known Suffolk names, but of their collections I know nothing. This brings to an end the list of worthies whose assiduity in the matter of collecting materials enabled William Bloyse to form what I dare say he called his Ordinary of Arms, but which I here offer, in the form of an alphabetical transcript, to the members of this Institute, and others interested in Suffolk Heraldry.
