

SUFFOLK COUNTY RECORDS.

The principal justice of the peace in each county is the custos rotulorum or keeper of the records; the other justices were, formerly, custodes or conservatores pacis, who claimed their power by prescription, or were bound to exercise it by the tenure of their lands, or were chosen by the freeholders in full County Court before the sheriff. After the deposition of Edward II. the election of the conservators of the peace was taken from the people and given to the King. The statute 34 Edw. III. c.1 gave the conservators of the peace power of trying felonies, when they acquired the appellation of justices. After 1590 they were appointed to keep the peace in the particular county named, and to enquire of, and to determine offences in such county committed.

It was ordained by Statute 18 Edw. III., st. 2, c. 2, that two or three of the best reputation in each county shall be assigned to be keepers of the peace. By Statute 34 Edw. III. their number was increased to four, and in the reign of Richard II. their number in each county was eight, which number was further enlarged with the growth of the number of statute laws committed from time to time to the charge of the justices of the peace.

Any two or more justices of the peace are empowered by commission to hear and determine offences which is the ground of their criminal jurisdiction at Quarter Sessions. "Besides the jurisdiction which the justices of each county at large exercise, in these and other matters at Quarter Sessions, authority is moreover given by various statutes to the justices acting for the several divisions into which counties are for that purpose distributed, to transact different descriptions of business at special sessions."

The Court of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace is a Court that must be held in each county once in every quarter of a year. The records or rolls of the sessions are committed to the custody of a special officer, denominated, as before stated, the custos rotulorum; and to him the nomination of the clerk of the peace, of the county belongs—an officer who (among other duties) acts as clerk to the Court of Quarter Sessions and records all their proceedings.

The antiquity, therefore, of the appointment of justices of the peace, and the progressive power of their jurisdiction over county affairs, may rouse in the mind of the student of local history the fact that the records of their proceedings contain valuable information concerning county and parochial government. Doubtless such would have been the case to a large extent if the records had been carefully preserved. The accompanying list of Suffolk county records, remaining in the possession of the Clerk of the Peace at Ipswich and Bury St. Edmunds, shews that no careful preservation of the documents has been made, and that the earliest collection dates from the year 1639.

That earlier documents and books did exist is to be seen from the articles on the historic documents which were in the possession of the Right Honourable E. R. Wodehouse, published in Part IV. of the 13th

Report of the Historical MSS. Commissioners. Among the documents are two volumes of manuscripts relating to the conduct of public affairs in the county of Suffolk during the 17th Century. Lord Francis Hervey, who had access to the two volumes, has published extracts from these books under the title of "Suffolk Magistrates' Letter Book." The compiler of these extracts states that these volumes appear to have originally belonged to members of the Bacon family; that the earlier and larger Bacon Letter Book relates to the period from 1608 to 1640, while the smaller Bacon Letter Book covers the period 1664-1676. The excerpts in the latter book were evidently taken from the Sessions Order Book for the years named, and it therefore seems probable that other Bacon Letter Books were formerly in existence, for it would be strange for the compiler of the two volumes to have omitted making extracts from the Sessions Order Books for the years 1639-1651, and 1651-1664, which are still preserved. The Right Honourable E. R. Wodehouse was the representative of Edmund Bacon, of Redgrave, 1658, a well known justice of Suffolk.

The larger Bacon Letter Book is of great value, seeing that it contains excerpts from a Sessions Order Book no longer accessible to the student. The accompanying collection of extracts is from the earliest Sessions Order Book, 1639-1651. From these entries we may gather the character of parochial and county government during one of the most exciting periods of English History. From them we get a full insight into the welfare of the poor, and the protection they enjoyed.

The poor, at times destitute of home and shelter, found refuge for themselves and families under the church roof. Thus we find an order from the justices of the peace was necessary to evict John Brown, "who layeth with his wife in the church porch of Coddenham, and maketh that his habitation, refusing to accept of a convenient house provided by the town," 1640. Again in 1651, a similar order was issued to eject one, Robert Peck, a very poor man, his wife, and family, who had taken up their residence in Walsham le Willows Church, in that year. Little respect was paid to the sanctity of God's House, even after the Restoration. John Battelie, of Dunwich, refused to repair the chancel, and turned the church porch into a stable for his horses.

The parish churches were allowed to fall into decay, but frequent contributions were levied by the justices of the peace when the buildings suffered any great damage from storm or fire. When Mildenhall Church steeple fell in 1688 a sum of £40 was granted towards its restoration.

A grant was made towards the re-building of the Church of St. Mary's, Bungay, "destroyed by a dreadful fire in 1700"; towards the repair of Bramfield steeple in the same year, and in the following year towards the repair of Melford steeple, which had fallen down. It was estimated that a sum of £1,800 would be required to complete its restoration. In 1697 a grant was made to Mr. George Borough, rector of Somerton, because "a great and violent tempest of thunder and lightning happened, whereby the parsonage house was set on fire, and damaged to the value of £80.

Grants were made to persons in distress. Lady Soame, widow of Sir William Soame, sometime High Sheriff of Suffolk, was granted £3 yearly by the justices at Beccles, 7 Oct., 1700. Many petitioners who had served King and country and had thereby fallen into distress received yearly pensions. Thus, Thomas Partridge, of Needham Market, who "formerly lived in good sort . . . in the late Civil War, for his loyalty to King Charles, was plundered by Cromwell's army of the greatest part of his stock . . . and was reduced to a very low condition," was granted a pension of £5 yearly. The pension of James Brand, of Walton, was increased from twenty shillings to £4 yearly "in consideration of his infirmity and his service to Charles I. and Charles II. as a soldier by land and sea."

Payments made by the justices frequently point out the laxity of gaol supervision. £5 was awarded "to the people who apprehended one, Pulham, a highwayman, who broke out of gaol, 1699; twenty shillings was paid to one, Symms, of Newmarket, for care and paines in apprehending some prisoners who had escaped out of Bury Gaol; and the same amount was granted to Robert King for some people of Thurlow who assist in the capture of the runaways, 1695." It is not surprising to find that George Patten, keeper of the gaol, was discharged from office for negligence in allowing diverse escapes. Recommendation was made of James Hunt, "thief-catcher," of Hadleigh, to other justices of the peace for his diligence in apprehending prisoners escaped from Bury Gaol.

A gaoler's office was not a profitable profession, as we see by the following order of the justices, 9 Aug., 1645.

"Whereas very many persons of several parishes have been committed to his Majesty's Gaol at Ipswich for witchcraft, which hath caused a great and extraordinary charge to the gaoler by bringing the said prisoners several times to this gaol delivery, and for the providing for and maintaining of the said persons, very poor and impotent, many of whom are acquitted by proclamation and many by verdict, it is ordered that the rate fall upon the parishes whose inhabitants procured the attachment of the prisoners."

This order produced "differences between the inhabitants of Copdock and James Rigges, keeper of Ipswich Gaol, for payment for charges for witches," and when they, who called for the tune, had to pay the piper, the piping or persecution for witches tended to cease. The people then turned their attention towards other amusements, for we find that in 1701, "diverse people within the division of Woodbridge and Ipswich kept public houses and encouraged football matches for unlawful lucre and gain; and also races, wrestling, dancing, cock-fighting, drawing matches, and several other such unlawful and disorderly pastimes, and did thereby occasion great numbers of people as well servants as others to meet together to their great expense and loss of time, and disturbance of His Majesty's Peace."

At Bury, 14 Oct., 1695, an order was made for raising of the posse comitatus to suppress rioters "who in sundry parts of this county have assembled themselves together in a tumultuous and riotous manner, burnt carts and waggons, carried away goods and chattels, and put divers persons in danger of their lives."

In the following year, 1696, an order was issued in the month of April at Beccles, Woodbridge, Ipswich, and Bury "that in respect of the danger under which the nation lies from an intended assassination of his present Majesty, and an invasion from France carried on by the late King James, printed copies of the Association lately entered into by both Houses of Parliament, be tendered to the housekeepers, lodgers, and others of every parish; and the constables to return the names of the people who refuse to subscribe to the Association." The full returns thus made of all the male inhabitants above 16 years of age then residing in the county, is preserved among the documents in the Public Record Office (see Petty Bag, Association Oath Rolls, 1696).

The Woodbridge "Kalendar of Gaol," 15 July, 1685, mentions the names of several persons, principally Quakers, who refused to take the oath of allegiance. The following names appear in the list of members of the Society of Friends who repeatedly made their appearance at Sessions to be recommitted to gaol till they found sureties to be of good behaviour; if discharged, they were to pay fees and fines due:— William Bedford, Susan Partridge, Deborah Shooter, Susan Bennett, Elizabeth Piggott, Elizabeth Burton, John Birch, Charles Weston, John Dowseing, William Bennett. The latter died in gaol; his death is recorded in the register of the Society as follows:—"Died prisoner in the gaol for the testimony of Jesus."

Throughout the records many sidelights are thrown upon the relationships existing between master and apprentice, mistress and maidservant, farmer and labourer, and upon the conditions of service both in the army and navy. The following is one instance of admission to the navy:—

"John Trussell was indicted for felony and petty larceny, and having confessed his corporal punishment was respited, and he was sent to Captain Patty to go to sea in His Majesty's Service, 1695."
